Not for a long time has any new fabric caused so great a sensation as duvetine, the wonderful new material which was brought out in Paris. The material is so light and soft that it clings as limply as wet cheesecloth, and it has a smooth, rippling effect when draped on the figure that it suggests velvet material dipped in water, though it is much softer and thinner than velvet. The stuff is made into lovely wraps of various colors and shades, and these wraps are particularly pretty with the brilliant linings that are good this year.
